"The state of the labourer's cottage is very bad; badly constructed, one floor and one room on that floor, partly divided by some article of furniture; damp walls; earth floors; smoky chimneys; a small window or two, often no more than a square foot and never opened; no out-offices [lavatories] or any accommodation whatsoever.' Thus wrote Rev William Jones in 1865 of the

Pen Castell

Pencastell takes its name from the Iron Age promontory fort the building itself, but it started life as four terraced cottages at one end. Sleeping arrangements were probably a croglot probably worked on local farms and helped with unloading li

Water supply is from a spring, and is delicious.

The original house was built of rubble and was lime-washed. would have looked very white. It had about 10 acres of land. Bach and Parc Cuareli and the promontory and coastal slope.

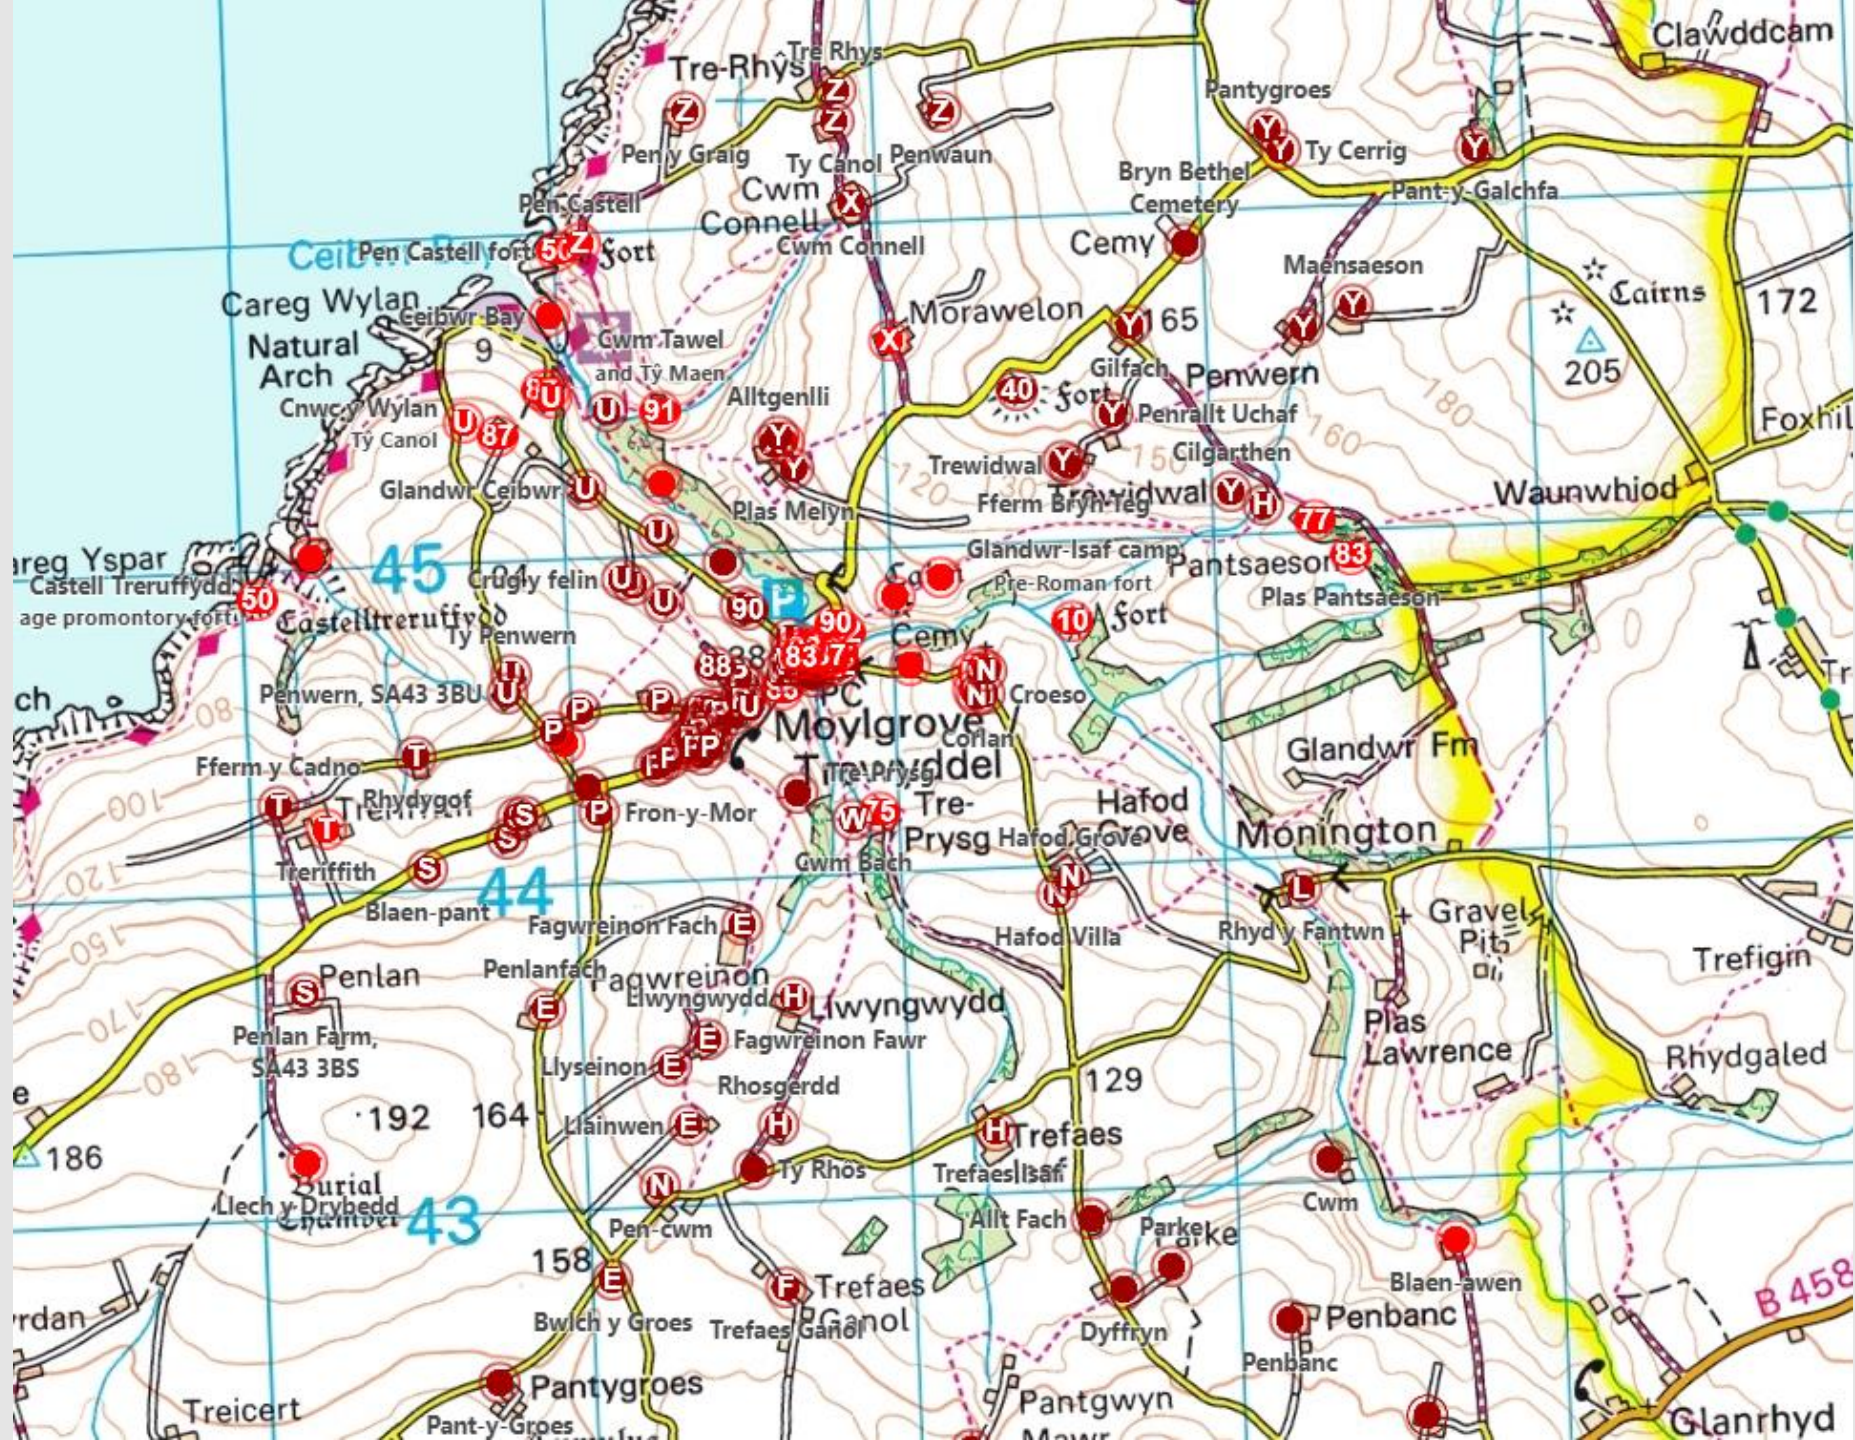

The house became one at some stage in the late 1930s.

Various colourful characters have owned and left their mark. After the war Nigel Hay was the owner. He had played cricket for England. His wife had been a famous actress who had played Peter Pan when it was first put on as a play.

The late Stanley Davies (who sadly died in 2017 aged 96) was a great source of stories from the old days. Just after the war the country was starving and someone sitting behind a desk in t
